I will keep on trying

I like to write these short stories. I like to express my inner thoughts and put them on paper with a lot of laughter and self-reflection.

I also know how to take myself way too seriously. And how to create my own little dramas.

With all good intentions, I always try to look on the bright side of life, but every now and then, I fail miserably. I try to always wake up with a smile on my face, but that instant grin, wears thin from time to time. Some days I just feel blue and deserted.

I know I am never alone, that I am loved and cared for. But it sure doesn't feel that way when I am sad and lonely. I know I have every reason to be happy, being here, living comfortably, in this day and age. But I do not always appreciate it, particularly when I am very tired and life is not going my way.

But today, I woke up happy, smiling, full of energy, ready to start this brand new day. And even the dark clouds and the pouring rain cannot change my mood. I will face all the challenges of this new day and I will try so very hard to make the most of it. My daily resolution: carpe diem, well, at least until noon!

Some days are just not worth living. And when it's one of those days, I know I should have stayed in bed. When everything that can go wrong, does go wrong, my persistence is greatly challenged. I try to remain calm and positive, but in the end something makes me snap.

Every morning I get another chance at walking through life in grace. Every morning I get another chance to start all over again. And most of the time, I grab that chance and really make the effort. I don't always succeed. Sometimes I give in before noon, other times I give up in the evening. But every now and then, I succeed!

More importantly, and most importantly, I will keep on trying. Succeeding more often than not, I get more ambitious. Carpe Diem all day, and beyond! Walking around with a true smile on my face, I know I will always keep on trying....for as long as I shall live.
