

nicky

Heritage

It's interesting to see how not just the energy from the family, but also the culture in which you are brought up, has an impact on your energy system. Most frequently the family background leads up to at least three or four constraints in our matrix, but the cultural heritage can also settle in your matrix. Especially amongst those of us who came in as karma cleaners, as those noble souls working to clear the karma carried by humanity.

There are several areas in the world where major cultural karma cleaning is required before we can all smoothly move on to the next level.

Now we are talking about really brave souls. Souls that grow up in strictly organised societies, tied down by rules and obligations. Societies where deviant behaviour is almost inevitably resulting in some kind of a witch hunt.

For someone who carries the cultural heritage in one or more energy stamps it is relatively easy to let go once they are removed. They either breakaway completely or the removal of the energy stamps makes it possible for them to just do their own thing within society without being affected by the burden of that society.

But not when it is settled in your matrix. When your cultural heritage is encrypted in the matrix you will always be affected and bound by the rules even though you think you can break away from it all together. It's like growing up and you look at yourself realising that you have turned out to be just like your mother or your father in more ways than you would like to admit to. Even to the extent you said you never wanted to be like them at all.

Being there to help release cultural karma takes a lot of braveness and patience. Patience and persistence though, is the key to success. Rushing in and then standing out there at the wrong place and time will inevitably lead to that witch hunt. Yet standing there, working from below the surface, you are bound to see innocent souls getting hurt. You begin to doubt the purpose of it all.

For some brave souls the persistence takes it's toll. The waiting, the trying, the immense love in your heart and the lack of visible result of all your efforts can and will get you down. Know though that in the end it will all pay off. Know also that you are being recognised for your work. Keep shining your light in whatever way you can. When the time is right and the veil gets lifted the results that are already there will become very apparent. So please, please, please don't let them get you (down).